

Failure is Impossible Planning

When we get our mind into a positive, believing space after doing a visualization like the one here, this is where our creative juices and beliefs can be in charge of the planning. This is where we plan in a growth mindset not a fixed mindset.

1. Go through the Future Visualization
2. If failure wasn't possible, if your desired results were inevitable what would you be planning in the next 90 days?

Take time each quarter to plan in this way. It's so much more fun and it takes the drudgery and doubt out of looking at our calendars.

This is where belief in our BIG goals is intertwined with our planning.

Planning for the Obstacles

This step is as important as the planning.

What obstacles do you foresee getting in your way of implementing and completing your plan?

List them

What are you going to do when these obstacles come?

List the way you're going to Honor your Time, handle interruptions, provide margin in your calendar to handle the unexpected.

Many of our obstacles are our thoughts about what is possible or what might come up during this quarter. Get coached on them and run models so you can see when these thoughts get in your way of taking fluid and powerful action.
